

FALL 2004

WING BEAT NEWS

WHERE CAN I HUNT PHEASANTS AND WATERFOWL?

Pheasant populations do well when grassy or weedy vegetation in fallow fields, ditch banks and other non-farmed areas is preserved for nesting and brood cover. Planting of vetch and other cover crops on idle farm land is beneficial to pheasants and other wildlife species. Corn stubble, grain straw, and other crop residues left in the fields over winter provide critical food and cover for pheasants and other wildlife. Cleaning only one side of a ditch leaves critical habitat for wildlife. Planting of perennial vegetation on levees, road corridors, field borders or other non-farmed areas will produce more pheasants.

The 2004 general statewide pheasant season is November 13, 2004 through December 26, 2004. Only male pheasants may be taken as follows: Two male pheasants per day for the first two days of the season and three male pheasants per day thereafter. Hunters may possess four male pheasants on the second day and six male pheasants on and after the third day of the hunting season. The shooting hours for pheasants shall be 8:00 a.m. to sunset.

In general, the Sacramento Valley pheasant brood survival was average to below average where habitat is present because of the drier than usual spring. Hunting prospects are below average in most locations.

For landowners and land managers – So you want to grow more pheasants. Many people have noted that good annual crops of pheasants here in our Central Valley Mediterranean climate are generally produced by unusually late, wet springs or localized flooding. We now realize that plentiful and timely rainfall spreading moisture over wide areas creates brood cover with high numbers of insects. Brood cover mixed with nesting cover creates a plentiful food supply for the pheasant chicks. The techniques for emulating Mother Nature are described in the 28 page 2002 Pheasant Workshop Summary Transactions. If you would like a free copy, please call wildlife biologist Dale Whitmore at (530) 743-5068.

LICENSED GAME BIRD CLUBS

Licensed game bird clubs are private areas where released game birds are hunted. Some offer daily or multiple-bird hunting opportunities. There are Zone A and Zone B Clubs. Both hens and roosters are legal to hunt.

There are 2 basic options used in operating a Private Licensed Game Bird Club: 1) the Scheduled Field Method or 2) the Free Roaming System. The Scheduled Field Method often requires a call ahead and a request for a certain number of birds in your own field. Your card may be pre-punched for the number of birds you requested. The Free Roaming System is more flexible for the hunter in that their cards are punched only with the number of birds they actually take home. The hunter must be very ethical, not pass up hens and make every effort to retrieve slightly crippled pheasants or the price per bird may be higher under either system.

The following Zone A clubs are located in the Central Valley. The Zone A shooting season for pheasants shall commence on the Saturday nearest the 15th of October and extend for 114 consecutive days. For other domestically reared game birds (usually chukar and bobwhite quail), the Zone A shooting season begins on September 1 and ends on March 31 of the following year. Please contact the clubs for specifics about their operation.

COMMUNITY PHEASANT HUNTING AREAS

These hunting co-operatives are usually operated as a fund raiser for community projects. Most operate only during the pheasant season, and all Fish and Game regulations apply. Pen raised pheasants augment the natural populations on these private lands. Hunters pay a nominal fee (usually $75-140). Members receive a map of the available lands and there are usually no field assignments or check in/out requirements. You just go hunting!

DEPARTMENT OF FISH AND GAME TYPE A WILDLIFE AREAS AND NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGES

Commonly asked questions about how I get access to the Type A state wildlife areas and federal wildlife refuges for pheasant or waterfowl hunting?

How do I apply for a reservation? Official applications are available to the public through license agents and department offices. Applicants can purchase either a $1.25 application card or a $6.25 application card to apply for either 1 hunt day or 5 hunt days, or may apply for every available Saturday, Sunday, and/or Wednesday hunt date for one or more areas by completing a season-long application card and returning it with the appropriate payment to the License and Revenue Branch. To be included in the drawing, the completed application must be received in the License and Revenue Branch, 3211 S Street, Sacramento, CA 95816, or at the address indicated on the application at least 17 days before the hunt date requested.

Hunters may apply for a reservation as many times per season as desired but no more than once for each area for each shoot day. A reservation shall assure entry for up to six persons including the person in whose name the reservation was issued. No more than two persons may be hunters who have adult licenses. Each person who is a least 18 years of age may be accompanied by up to two hunters holding junior hunting licenses or two non-shooters or one of each. Northern California exceptions: At the Sacramento and Delevan National Wildlife Refuges, each reservation assures entry for up to four individuals, whether adult hunters, junior hunters, or non-shooters. Numbered reservations will be honored in numerical order, starting at the time the check station opens.

How can I hunt one of the Type A state wildlife areas and federal wildlife refuges if I do not have a reservation? The Type A refuges and wildlife areas are operated with the following 2 basic procedures:

Non-reservation hunters arriving after 8:00 PM will be assigned a first-come, first-served number. Overnight parking is allowed, but not required, at all check stations except Yolo Bypass WA where overnight parking is not allowed. *Exception - Yolo Bypass WA - Hunters without reservations may register at the area headquarters 2 miles west of the hunter check station on County Road 32-B (Chiles Road) between 4:00 PM and 6:00 PM on Tuesday and Friday before each hunt day to participate in a lottery drawing that will be held at 6:00 PM. 2004 Gamebird Heritage Junior Pheasant Hunts – Sacramento Valley, Central Sierra Region and Central Coast Region

We appreciate your interest in the Junior Pheasant Hunts. Below is some information on the hunts and how the application process works. Junior pheasant hunts are sponsored by the Department of Fish and Game and local community groups/sportsmen organizations. There is no fee for applying or participating. Hunts are open to anyone holding a current California Junior Hunting License.

Hunters are selected by random computer drawing. All postcard entries for a junior pheasant hunt must be received by the posted deadline date. All applications received by the deadline have an equal chance of being selected. Late applications will be considered on a first come-first served basis, only if there are still spaces available.

Only permit holders will be allowed to hunt. No junior hunters will be taken on a first come-first served basis on the day of the hunt. Each hunt area is drawn separately. QUAIL SEASON

Early Mountain Quail Season Zone A starts Saturday, September 11, 2004 and ends Friday, October 15, 2004. This early mountain quail zone includes the counties of Alpine, Butte, Del Norte, Glenn, Humboldt, Inyo, Lassen, Modoc, Mono, Plumas, Shasta, Sierra, Siskiyou, Tehama, Trinity, and those portions of Amador, Calaveras, El Dorado, Fresno, Madera, Mariposa, Nevada, Placer, Tuolumne, Tulare, and Yuba Counties lying east of the western boundary of the national forests. The General Quail Season for all quail in Zone A is open from October 16, 2004 to January 30, 2005 (same as Balance of the State Season in Zone C).

The Early Coastal Season (Zone B) for all quail in the counties of Marin, Napa, Solano, Sonoma, Lake and Mendocino is from September 25, 2004 to January 30, 2005.

The 2004 season for all quail in the Balance of the State Season (Zone C) runs from October 16, 2004 to January 30, 2005. The balance of the state season (all species) hunting Zone C includes the remaining land area not included in Zone B (the counties of Marin, Napa, Solano, Sonoma, Lake and Mendocino).

Bag Limit: 10 quail in any combination of species per day. Possession Limit: double the daily bag limit. Be sure to check the California Hunting Regulations for Resident Game Birds for further information. Call the numbers listed under PLACES TO HUNT on how to acquire maps of those areas.

Shooting Hours for Upland Game Birds - The shooting hours for all upland game birds, except for pheasants and the spring wild turkey season, shall be from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset. The shooting hours for pheasants shall be from 8:00 a.m. to sunset. The shooting hours for the spring wild turkey season shall be from one-half hour before sunrise to 4:00 p.m.

Pat Lauridson, the Department of Fish and Game Wildlife Biologist responsible for quail management in California, reports that: "Quail brood survival likely suffered due to abnormally low spring rainfall. Accordingly, hunting prospects in the Sacramento Valley and adjacent foothills look fair to good depending upon adult carryover within local populations".

HUNTING QUAIL -In northern California there are two species of quail, the California or "valley" quail and the mountain quail.

The California quail is a social animal and spends most of the year, including the hunting season, in large groups called coveys. These coveys are usually formed in August and September when several family groups, consisting of parents and their offspring, merge to form one large group, the covey.

California quail prefer to roost in dense evergreen shrubs or trees, usually close to water. The covey rises from its roost between first light and sunrise. In cold or foul weather they may leave the roost much later. Just before the covey leaves the roost, one of the males will usually give a few good morning "Chi-ca-go" calls. This helps any quail that may have been separated from the covey, either when they went to roost or during the night, find their way back.

California quail are hunted in chaparral, oak woodlands and stream side habitats in lower elevation foothills and the valleys. California quail are quite vocal and sometimes the covey can be located by simply listening for their "chi-ca-go" call given most frequently during periods of active feeding in early morning or late evening. However, in order to consistently locate coveys of quail a hunting dog is a must.

In contrast, mountain quail can be found on public lands in the Sierra Nevada and Coast Range forests. Hunting mountain quail in the steep brushy areas that they prefer can be a real challenge. Like the California quail, coveys of mountain quail can be located by listening for their high, clear, rather plaintive call. They will readily answer the whistle of a hunter trying to locate them.

HUNTING QUAIL WITHOUT A DOG - The first step is to locate a covey of quail, this goes for persons both with and without a dog. There are two keys to this puzzle: one is cover, the other is water. Once water has been located, search the surrounding terrain and locate some good cover, the thicker the better. If there is no good cover within 1/4 mile try another spot. Head toward the cover, keeping an eye open for quail scurrying along the ground out the "back door". Also keep an ear open for their "pit-pit" alarm call. If they spot you and they are a good distance away, you may hear their assembly call

If they are heading up a valley draw, odds are they will continue to travel along the cover in front of you. Place one person on each side of the draw and follow them. If you have a third person, put one down in the draw. This will help prevent you from moving past them. If they are heading up the side of a hill (especially a steep one) it is best to try and out maneuver them than to out climb them. In most cases they will go right over the top or hang up in some cover on the hill. Send one person around the other side while the other one stays at the bottom of the hill. At some predetermined time both of you head up the hill from opposite sides. Be prepared for some fast action at the top of the hill, but also be sure of where the other hunter is before shooting.

LOCATING DOWNED QUAIL- You are standing in the area where you know the dead quail fell, but you don't see it. Now what? Look for loose feathers on the ground. Feathers are almost always left where they hit the ground. However, there often is another group of feathers dropped by a quail when shot that can be misleading. The reason they can be misleading is that the bird often travels a considerable distance beyond where it was hit, and if there is even the slightest breeze the feathers can drift a considerable distance from where it might be. The two groups can usually be told apart by where the feathers are found and how tightly the feathers are grouped. The feathers left on the ground where the bird lands are usually tightly bunched. Feathers from the in-air hit are usually found widely scattered and on top of shrubbery. Don't expect to find the quail sitting right there among the feathers. Most often they bounce or roll a few feet from the point of impact with the ground. When you find these feathers remember the direction it was heading when you rolled it. Search the area beyond the feathers in the same direction. If you have searched this area with no success, double the distance beyond the feathers and search again. They usually travel further than you think they did. It is not unusual to spend 30 minutes searching for a single downed quail. You owe it to that bird to keep trying.

The creation of brushpiles and sources of water are methods used to increase quail numbers on wildlife areas and near rural homes. The DFG and other conservation groups have installed hundreds of underground water tanks or guzzlers, which collect rainwater for wildlife. Homeowners can provide water by allowing a hose to drip into a half barrel or basin placed on the ground.

SAFETY WHILE QUAIL HUNTING

Always know where all member of your hunting party are. Hunting parties should be kept to two or three. Larger parties should consider spreading out and splitting into small groups. If your party has found some quail, determine in which directions it would be unsafe to shoot.

Each person should wear blaze orange and talk with your buddies so that you know where they are. Camouflage clothing is not necessary for quail hunting, the quail know where you are regardless of what you wear. If you have to chase down a crippled bird, make sure your gun is on safety. Take water for your dog and you.

Shark Attack Serves as Reminder of How to Minimize the Risk - August 18, 2004

By Carrie Wilson

This shark attack, which caused the tragic death of California sport fishing advocate Randall Fry, serves as a reminder of what other divers can do to minimize the risk of being attacked by the ocean's top predator.

It has been confirmed by the Mendocino County coroner that Fry, 50, of Auburn, died from injuries caused by a white shark (Carcharodon carcharias), aka great white shark. Fry and his companion were free diving for red abalone along California's north coast about 10 miles north of Fort Bragg at Kibesillah Rock in Mendocino County. They were approximately 150 feet from shore and in waters between 15 and 20 feet deep.

"It's extremely rare that a human is attacked by a shark," said Kon Karpov, DFG's Senior Marine Biologist and abalone researcher in Fort Bragg. "The best advice is to dive with a partner and to avoid areas with high concentrations of pinnipeds, such as harbor seals, sea lions, or elephant seals." While Fry was an avid diver and, according to his friends, cautious and well aware of the inherent risks of diving in the open ocean, California Department of Fish and Game (DFG) experts are reminding people that there are precautions that can be taken to minimize the threat of a shark attack.

"It may be a case of mistaken identity or it may be investigatory or territorial behavior," said DFG's shark expert Dr. Robert Lea. "The shark's primary prey are marine mammals, and if you happen to look like one, from a shark's perspective, and you are near the surface, you're at risk." DFG recommends that divers who are spear fishing or abalone diving should try to stay in kelp forested areas where sharks are less likely to be searching for food. Sharks tend to swim in open water areas, both shallow and deep. While using SCUBA gear is unlawful for abalone diving, it is legal for spear fishing and allows divers to stay close to the ocean's bottom.

"Shark attacks occur from the bottom up," said Karpov. "When using SCUBA, divers should minimize their time spent on the surface going for air and when returning to the boat or shore. This will help to decrease the chance of being mistaken for a pinniped near the surface."

Another tip is to frequently transfer caught fish to a nearby boat or the shore. This practice is highly recommended as bleeding fish can attract sharks to the site. "We can take precautions as recreationalists, but the ocean is not entirely a risk-free environment," Karpov said.

Sharks do not deliberately target humans as prey, however. That was likely the case with Fry, and a swimmer who was fatally attacked at Avila Beach in San Luis Obispo County last year. Both were close to the water's surface where they could have been mistaken for a seal or sea lion. Abalone enthusiasts in open water are at greater risk because, as free divers, they frequently surface for air, and can more easily be mistaken for marine mammals.

Abalone diving is a popular activity along the North Coast. Karpov said that data derived from abalone punch cards indicates that on the average, divers spend nearly 100,000 days annually diving for abalone, and more than 30,000 people buy permits each year. Rock picking for abalone is an alternative to free diving and also reduces the risk of a shark attack.

The following are shark statistics recorded by DFG including the latest incident:

- Since record keeping began in the early 1950s, there have been 11 fatal shark attacks off the California coast (10 confirmed from white sharks).
- A recorded 96 non-fatal incidents with sharks have occurred off the West Coast; 83 of these were in California.
- The last fatal attack was a year ago. In August 2003, a white shark estimated to be 15 to 18 feet long attacked and killed 50-year-old college instructor Deborah Franzman of Nipomo while she was taking a morning swim off Avila Beach in San Luis Obispo County.

White Shark facts:

- White sharks play a crucial role in the marine ecosystem by helping to suppress pinniped (seals and sea lions) populations. The only real threat white sharks face are from humans, as well as the occasional killer whale.
- Because of their elusive nature, there are no population estimates available for white sharks. However, experts agree that their numbers are extremely low.
- White sharks are a protected species in California, Australia, Malta and South Africa. Increasingly, scientists are suggesting that they should be protected in all oceans of the world.
- Adult white sharks grow to about 21 feet long and dominate their domain as one of the top-level predators of the ocean. In 1986, scientists were able to measure a female white shark captured off Pt. Vicente that measured 17.6 ft and weighed 4,140 lbs.

General tips on how to avoid a shark encounter:

- Most importantly, don't swim in or near areas frequented by sea lions, harbor seals, and elephant seals, near their rookeries, or near the mouths of rivers where the animals concentrate looking for fish.
- Minimize time spent on the surface. Wearing a wetsuit and fins, or lying on a surfboard, creates the silhouette of a seal from below. Shark attacks are often believed to be cases of mistaken identity, with surfing or swimming humans mistaken for marine mammals.
- Dive with a partner and stay alert to your surrounding environment.
- Avoid swimming during times of reduced sunlight, such as foggy mornings or dusk, which are ideal times to be mistaken for a seal.
- Some high risk areas to avoid include waters around the Farallon Islands, San Miguel Island, the mouth of Tomales Bay, and Ano Nuevo. For more information and maps on white sharks, go to www.dfg.ca.gov/mrd/whiteshark.html
